Doubts remain

Obviously the author of your editorial on the JFK assassination ("The will to doubt," May 16) has not read the complete Warren Commission report. If he had, he would know there is evidence too numerous to list which was ignored or suppressed in the final report. This includes the FBI's spectrographic tests of the bullet, and photographs and x-rays of the President's body which were not included in the 26 volumes of evidence. These tests, photographs and x-rays alone would either prove or disprove the commission's single-bullet theory on which its lone assassin conclusion rests.

You say the commission's conclusion is the simplest one consistent with the given evidence. The problem is that not all the evidence was given.
